

Diversity Infusion Mini Grants

Mini-grants of up to $500 for the creation or revision of courses to include diverse voices are now available. These grants are meant to provide the resources necessary to infuse diverse voices, especially those from historically underrepresented populations, into the syllabi of existing courses or to develop new courses that explore issues and inclusion from an academic perspective. Grant funds can be used to purchase course materials (e.g., images, books, films, audio recordings, etc.). It is expected that courses that are (re)designed with funds from the Mellon Foundation Diversity and Inclusion grant will be taught at least two times in the next four years.

To apply, please submit an application letter that includes a description of the course, a project outline that addresses the questions below, and a basic budget.

1. How will the inclusion of diverse voices and perspectives strengthen this course or, in the case of newly designed courses, the program's course offerings?
2. What approaches and/or methods are envisioned in relation to the project objective?
3. What percentage of your newly redesigned course will focus on issues related to diversity? If you will be revising an existing course, how changed will your revised version of the course be from the original?
4. How often do you intend to offer this course and will it count towards a major, minor, or general education requirement?

Please submit all materials via email to ctl@centre.edu by Monday, April 3. Please contact Rodmon King with any questions.
